I have also done some research and found a way to get rid of the NVIDIA V-Sync feature. I have tried to fix the game several times using methods found on the Internet, on minecraft-head-canon. I have also tried to fix it myself using the steps below, with the help of a friend. I have tried to run the game in a large and small resolution using the same game settings. I have tried using and not using the FOV Fix from . I have added the latest files, reset the game and removed the game files. I have removed, installed, reset and added files and done this process four times. I have also adjusted some settings in the NVIDIA Control Panel, but to no avail. I have also tried the Warp Zones from , but I did not find them useful, but I kept them, so you could also try that. I have also set the FPS to 60/10 for 60+ in the NVIDIA Control Panel. I have also tried to reset the game to the . I have tried the following: the game does not work with V-Sync disabled in the NVIDIA Control Panel. The game also crashes if I try to add a game controller. I do not know why I am still having these problems. I thought it would be easier than to actually fix them. They should have corrected these issues in the recent patches. I believe the problem lies in the NVIDIA Control Panel. When I search for the NVIDIA Control Panel, I get the following: . If you want me to post a picture of this, please contact me on my contact page, or in a message on this page. The game does not work when I use V-Sync disabled. PS: Sorry, I'm no good at English, I'm a Swedish developer, but I hope you understand me. Please let me know if I have to be more precise in my messages. I hope you can help! By the way, you are awesome. ;), I hope you can help me! :-D "Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2" is my nephew's copy. Good. ;), but now I'm on the internet so I'll have to get back to the work. The work is about 5 years in the making so I don't actually understand them enough to help you. Have you tried the Show High Screenshot option,
