Advisory: Vulnerable Web Sites FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE | Posted on 2012-12-26 A new software vulnerability being reported to Google's Web site team by a Google engineer could potentially be used to access privileged data in Google accounts on computers running on the Chrome OS. Chrome OS, formerly called Android for Work, is Google's free and open source operating system designed for use by businesses that need to protect sensitive data like financial information and personally identifiable information. In a blog post, Google engineer Karan Tej witnessed a remote desktop session where he was able to log into a company's Chrome OS. As he mentioned, the session ran an application called Google Drive that is pre-installed in Chrome OS, to which he was granted access. He was then able to access his personal Google account and see all the emails and other information stored on his Google account. Google is aware of the issue and a fix is currently being tested internally. Chrome OS uses Google Drive to centralize all data that has been uploaded to the cloud. The application needs to be able to access all the information in the company's Google account whether in the personal or in the work accounts on the device. This is just one small example of how the Vulnerability Alerts program at Google works: When we encounter a new issue, we notify our engineers who then Vacluse high school deputy principal accused of child sex offences A woman has been arrested and charged after allegations of child sex offences were made at Vacluse Boys' High School in Sydney's south-west. The 49-year-old woman, from Prospect, was arrested by detectives in the school's grounds last week after allegations of child sex offences were made, police said. She was taken to Dee Why Police Station where she was charged with multiple counts of sexual intercourse with a child, subject to an investigation and complain by the parents of the girl. Ms Konstantopoulos is a secondary school principal at Vaucluse Boys' High School.

(9News) The woman has been bailed to appear at Vaucluse Police Station in October. Vaucluse Boys' High School deputy principal,

Ms Konstantopoulos, said the matter was "disturbing" and could not comment further.

"The allegations are very concerning to the school and the school community," she said.

"However I will not comment on the allegations as it is an ongoing police investigation." Vaucluse police Inspector Joann Gardner said the school was "shocked and saddened to learn of the allegations" but the school community could be assured the school will act promptly to protect students and the public. "Police will continue to be present on the school grounds to monitor the management of the school to ensure the safety and security of students," Inspector Gardner said. "It is important to note that there is no evidence to suggest that students are in harm's way and police investigations cannot reveal the outcome of the case." The Independent Commission Against Corruption (ICAC) yesterday approved a request by parents to place their child in a local family home. Quantum-mechanical simulation of protein dynamics.
